SELF-REFLECTION ON THE TEST

My personality test results offer an enlightening perspective on my career choices. As an aspiring engineer and designer, my 63% introversion aligns with my preference for working on projects that require deep concentration and creativity, often in solitude. The 75% intuitive score suggests a natural inclination towards abstract thinking and innovative design, even though I initially believed I was more observant. Interestingly, my 58% feeling trait contrasts with my self-perception as more thinking-oriented, highlighting the importance of empathy and emotional connection in my creative processes. My 53% prospecting score reflects my adaptability and openness to new opportunities, crucial for freelance and dynamic roles. Lastly, the 61% turbulent score indicates my sensitivity to stress, reminding me to focus on self-care while navigating the pressures of my multifaceted career.

STRENGTHS AND WEAKNESSES

Strengths:

1. Creativity and Innovation: My strong intuitive trait fuels my ability to come up with unique design solutions and innovative concepts, evident in my diverse portfolio ranging from UI/UX design to graphic design and photography.
2. Adaptability: The prospecting aspect of my personality allows me to thrive in various roles and projects, from freelance design to leading marketing teams, demonstrating flexibility and a willingness to embrace change.
3. Empathy and Collaboration: Despite considering myself more logical, my feeling trait enhances my ability to connect with clients and team members, fostering collaborative and empathetic working relationships.

Weaknesses:

1. Stress Management: The turbulent aspect of my personality indicates a tendency towards self-doubt and stress, which can impact my performance under pressure. Developing better stress management techniques is essential.
2. Attention to Practical Details: Being more intuitive than observant, I may sometimes overlook practical details in favor of big-picture thinking. Balancing intuition with attention to detail can improve the practicality of my designs and solutions.
3. Decision-Making: My blend of feeling and prospecting traits might lead to indecision or difficulty in sticking to plans. Strengthening my decision-making process by setting clear priorities and goals can enhance my effectiveness.
